

SEAN ALEXANDER

CANDIDATE FOR CITY COUNCIL • NORTH VANCOUVER 2026

Part 1: Biography – The Journey of Sean Alexander

What Makes Me Who I Am Today

My path to public service began with a simple belief: leadership starts with listening and rolling up your sleeves. Born in Winnipeg, Manitoba, I spent my early years learning the values of a tight-knit community. When my family transitioned to Edmonton, Alberta, for my junior high and high school years, I discovered my passion for governance and advocacy by serving on student councils. This commitment to representing my peers followed me to the University of Alberta, where I continued my work in student government.

In 2006, my dedication to the democratic process went from campus to the community. I became a deeply active grassroots volunteer—door knocking, making phone calls, and working the ground level for several municipal, provincial, and local campaigns.

Choosing North Vancouver

On September 25, 2011, life brought me to North Vancouver under deeply personal circumstances. I moved here to support a dear friend whose parents had passed away. In a time of grief, something extraordinary happened: I completely fell in love with this city, its exceptional lifestyle, and above all, its people.

From my very first days navigating North Vancouver, I found the community to be incredibly warm, receptive, and welcoming. For the first time in my life, I felt a profound, undeniable calling to be a permanent, hard-working, contributing member of a community. I knew this was home.

A Lifestyle of Grassroots Service

To me, community service isn't about getting permission to list a corporate charity on a resume or checking a box for political points. Service is a daily lifestyle. Whether it's mowing an elderly neighbor's lawn, taking time out of my day to help a young lady carry a heavy box to her vehicle, or simply being there for a neighbor in need, I believe in organic, everyday kindness. That is the authentic neighborly care I represent.

Over the years, I have deepened my knowledge of local governance. In 2023, I stepped into grassroots committee work to understand the real issues affecting local and provincial systems, and I currently hold an executive position on a local electoral association. I am well-versed in how communities and political processes work.

I officially launched my campaign for City Council in June 2025. Since that day, I have made it my duty to attend almost every single City Council meeting to stay fully informed and ready to work for you from Day One.

Part 2: Policy & Issue Framework – Your Voice, Our City

"YOUR VOICE, OUR CITY, NO MORE SURPRISES"

The Grassroots Promise

My platform is not a rigid policy document written behind closed doors by special interests. It is a living, breathing framework built entirely through grassroots boots-on-the-ground hard work, public engagement, door knocking, and meeting you—the citizens—exactly where you are. I proudly have zero ties to corporate interest groups, hidden stakeholders, or local party factions. My only boss is you.

Core Leadership Principles

- Fairness, Equity, & Equality: I firmly believe that every single resident of North Vancouver deserves a seat at the table. It does not matter if you are Black, white, Asian, or part of any other community—I intend for all voices to be heard at City Council.
- True Transparency & Accountability: Accountability starts with communication. I give you my word that every message, question, or concern sent to my campaign will be personally answered within 48 hours.
- Active Listening & Actionable Solutions: I am not running to talk down to citizens from a council seat. I am running to work alongside you, amplify your grassroots voices, and turn your everyday concerns into actionable municipal policies.
- Enhancing Livability for All: Things are genuinely great in North Vancouver, but we can always do better. I want to serve as a collaborative voice in local government—not to simply follow past precedents blindly, but to bring people together to co-create solutions that enhance livability so that no individual is left behind.
- A Daily Lifestyle of Service: For Sean, community service isn't a checklist of organizations; it's a daily lifestyle of looking out for one another and stepping up whenever a neighbor is in need.
- Doing Better Means Real Results: For our city, "doing better" means tackling real, day-to-day issues like protecting affordability for seniors so they can stay in the communities they helped build, and ensuring safer streets for our families.
